Foodways is a term we use when we talk about food as more than nutrition. When we think about the foods we eat on various occasions, how they fit into the lives of our families, and the stories associated with those foods — or wonder who in the next generation will cook them — we are thinking about our foodways. Some traditions, such as those associated with Thanksgiving Day, are practiced nationally; others pertain to large regions of the U.S., such as the South; others may be local to your county or carried on by just your family. This program focuses on local and unique traditions. Light refreshments will be served following the program.
